Posture Chair Comparison Chart

Better posture produces better playing.

Wenger Music Posture Chairs are designed to put students and musicians in the best possible position to promote easier breathing and a more natural range of motion, while decreasing fatigue and discomfort. Wenger Music Posture Chairs solve the four main problems of standard chairs.

The four main problems with standard chairs:

1. When you sit back in standard chairs, the spine is forced out of its natural supportive position.
2. It's easy to slouch in a standard chair which forces the body down, lowering the rib cage and constricting the diaphragm.
3. Discomfort and lack of support makes you fidget and move to the edge of the seat, which on poorly designed chairs creates even less support.
4. This cycle quickly brings on fatigue and makes it difficult to focus on technique or performance.

Sousaphone Chair

Before 1946, playing the sousaphone was a very awkward exercise. Even students with the desire and talent were often too overwhelmed by the instrument's size and cumbersome nature to stick with it. Harry Wenger, a band leader and educator always looking for ways to help his students and fellow musicians, designed a chair that supports the instrument's bulk and lets musicians concentrate on their technique. The Sousaphone Chair hasn't changed much since Harry Wenger's original design. And neither has Wenger's desire to develop the innovations that enhance your musician's abilities.

- The Wenger Nota and Student Chairs also offer an optional Sousaphone Holder for improved posture; see page 15
- Wenger also offers a Sousaphone Wall Bracket for superior storage; see page 59
